LUMBERMEN PAY A BET TO RAILROADERS

Officials of the El Paso Milling company, game lovers in a good baseball contest which was played Sunday Oct. 19 paid their bet to the officials and office men of the Mexico North Western railroad with a $1000 bet on Wednesday evening. The loser of the games between teams from the two Pearson enterprises was bound by the agreement to furnish "cats" to the winning team and its friends among the railroad men.

A. L. Lathrop, of the milling company, presided as toastmaster and introduced the speakers, among whom were almost every afternoon at the country club and the millers say they do not expect to furnish the railroaders with meal tickets afterward.

WORK IS STOPPED ON GATES'S FINE MANSION

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 29.—Work on the $1,000,000 mansion which the late Charles G. Gates was erecting here was stopped on orders from the general contractors in New York. The building was intended by Mr. Gates to house the magnificent art collection left him by his father, the late John W. Gates, which is now stored in New York.

SENSATIONAL CHARGES MADE AGAINST O'GARA

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 29.—Sensational charges were made against Thos. A. O'Gara, president of the O'Gara company, before Judge Landis in the U. S. district court today.

The company went into bankruptcy six weeks ago, and Judge Carpenter appointed O'Gara receiver. Eastern stockholders, including Wm. B. Kerr, of Syracuse, now ask that O'Gara be relieved as a receiver, and make charges as follows:

That O'Gara is under indictment charged with receiving rebates from railroads; that he diverted funds of the company to his personal use; retained $400,000 due the company as commissions and equipment of the companies in his private enterprises.

Waifs of Sea Too Young to Realize Misfortune New Mexico Girl In Democratic Boquet

Three children of immigrants who perished during the burning of the liner Volturno at sea. The children are shown on the deck of steamship Kronland, members of the crew of which fished them out of the raging seas. The little lad on the right is wearing a suit made of an old blue flag by one of the kindly women passengers of the Kronland. Aided by the kindness of the Kronland passengers, the children romped and played away the hours on the trip into New York. The only time the children appeared to realize the absence of their parents was when they were being put to bed.—Copyright by International News Service.

POLITICS A CHECK TO BUSINESS, SAYS HILL

Head of Great Northern and Banker Vanderlip, of New York, Agree That Discussions Are Hurting. Chicago, Ill., Oct. 29.—James J. Hill, of the Great Northern railroad, and Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank of New York, who arrived here today to speak before the convention of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, each declared that political agitation is checking the progress of business.

Mr. Hill said that timidity of the financiers was allowing a business recession to develop. "This is the time for men to show courage," he asserted. "If big men are not willing to accept their responsibilities they should lay them down."

Mr. Vanderlip said that the hope of business is for "sound legislation."

An Exquisite Evening Gown Fully Described by Olivette

Behold an exquisite evening frock of white satin and duchess lace. Behold and admire, for this model comes from one of the smartest designers in all Paris. A blouse of the lace extends under the arms, where it turns back to make a rever under the arm. This bodice is held up on one side by a band of white net edged with small beads and on the other side by a nap made of several rows of iridescent spangles. A motif of black jet marks the side of the square décolletage. As the waist is a tiny belt made of two rows of iridescent spangles. Below this are two tiny paniers, and below this the lace falls in an irregular tunic. The under part of the skirt is a mass of the iridescent spangles over which falls a garland of beads and jet tassels. Beneath this the foundation skirt of white satin falls in a long-pointed train.

Miss Jonett Fall, Daughter of Senator A. B. Fall, Is One of 3 Debutantes at Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 30.—The first Democratic debutante boquet at the national capital in 15 years will be distinguished not only for the notable families it represents, but by the unusual character of the debutantes themselves.

Every bud is a "worth while" girl, interested in something more than the social round. Some excel in literature, others in art, and still more in music.

The girls are headed by Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of the speaker. She is surrounded by the following congressional debutantes: Miss Fern Church, daughter of representative Church, of California; Miss Eleanor Knowland, daughter of the representative from California; Miss Jonett Fall, daughter of the senator from New Mexico; Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of the senator from Georgia; Miss Marion L'Engle, daughter of the representative from Florida; and Miss Fay Hardy, daughter of the representative from Texas.

Little Bobbie and His Pa

Pa Writes a Poem About the Trustful Waitress but Fails to Make a Hit With Ma. By William F. Kirk.

I WAS reading last night about a man that has made nearly a hundred thousand dollars within a few days.

I wouldn't be surprised Pa said. Most of the people are getting simple nowadays anyhow.

You only say that because you can't write songs yourself, said Ma. If you could write songs & they made a hit, you would say that the people had excellent judgment. This piece that I was reading said the man who made the hundred thousand dollars didn't write any clever songs, for people with lots of brains to laugh about & enjoy. They were little simple things, ritten about winding streams & golden dreams & about my darling Kate & the old Mill Gate. That is the kind of songs that will sell.

He Tries a Song. I have often thought that I could write a song like that, said Pa. I never tried it, but I am going to try it now. I got an idea for such a song last yesterday at the dinner table. The pretty little waitress asked me if I would have apple pie or punkin pie & I said I would have punkin. Then she said I was wrong. I had punkin pie, we ain't got no punkin pie today. It almost made the tears come in my eyes, said Pa, to see so much honesty on the part of a humble little waitress, so I am going in the library now & I'll write a ballad about it. I am going to call it "The Trustful Waitress."

I don't think that is a good title for a song, said Ma. The title ought to be tender & romantic, like those in Texas by the Silvery Rio Grande.

But I am going to call it "The Trustful Waitress," said Pa. I'll write it after awhile he came out with these words for his new song:

Two maw. And while the two was dining both their hearts was life & gay. A pretty waitress waited on the two which there did dine.

The maid was dressed quite neatly though her garments weren't fine. "Appel or punkin pie," he said, in accents soft & sweet.

"Appel or punkin pie," the pretty waitress asked me, said Pa.

The men they both chose punkin in that city far away. And when they both had chosen, the waitress fair did smile.

Chorus. We haven't got no punkin pie. Of that we are sure. A drum from New Hampshire Ate the last piece that was left. You can't have none apple.

When Pa got thru reading his song to us, Ma just set & looked at him. I suppose you are speechless with admiration, said Pa.

Bobbie, get Ma yare poor father is flighty. Mybbe he will be all right after he gets a good night's sleep.
